

THE CORSAVA CHRONICLE

News, Trade & Civic Affairs of the Marivar League

LADY CORSAVA LIFTS REGATTA CURFEW

City to remain open throughout annual celebrations as thousands prepare to descend upon the harbour

CORSAVA — Lady Corsava has announced that the city's evening curfew will be suspended for the duration of this year's Azure Circuit, allowing residents and visitors to remain in the streets throughout the night.

The announcement is expected to bring a considerable boost to taverns and merchants. City officials have also confirmed that additional Guard patrols will be deployed throughout the harbour district and other major gathering places to maintain public safety.

The council has described the decision as an effort to ensure that "all citizens of the League may enjoy the regatta."

The regatta is expected to attract visitors from across the Azure Sea, with preparations already well underway. Several merchants have welcomed the decision, though some members of the Guard have reportedly expressed concern over the additional demands that the festivities will place upon the city's forces given recent events.

With only a few days remaining, the streets of Corsava are already beginning to fill with banners, visiting traders and crews preparing their vessels.

MYSTERIOUS DISEASE SWEEPS THE GUTTERWORKS

Tannery explosion feared to be connected as death toll passes thirty

Panic continues to spread through the Gutterworks following the explosion at the old tannery earlier this month, with medics now reporting a mysterious and apparently highly dangerous illness among residents of the district.

At least thirty people are believed to have died, with hundreds more reportedly suffering symptoms. Those afflicted have been described as developing dark purple veins beneath the skin, patches of unusually tough grey flesh, and severe deterioration of sight and memory.

The city's healers have so far been unable to agree upon the cause of the illness. Several have cautioned residents against spreading rumours, though the timing of the outbreak has led many to suspect a connection with the tannery explosion.

"Whatever this is, it is not a common fever," one healer, who requested anonymity, told the Chronicle. "We have seen symptoms I have never encountered before."

The Guard has reportedly restricted access to portions of the Gutterworks while investigations continue. Residents have complained, however, that little information has been provided regarding the source of the outbreak or measures being taken to contain it.

City officials have urged calm and promised that further information will be released as the investigation progresses.

LIAM NADU STILL MISSING

Golden Sails prepares for leadership change as search enters its third week

The disappearance of prominent merchant and Golden Sails leader Liam Nadu remains unresolved, with no confirmed sighting of the businessman since his disappearance.

Despite continued efforts to locate him, the City Guard has now stated that, it is unlikely that Liam Nadu remains in Corsava and if he does it is unlikely he will be recovered alive.

No body has been recovered, however, and investigators have not publicly ruled out the possibility that Nadu left the city.

The Golden Sails merchant company has begun making preparations for a change in leadership. Sources within the organisation say arrangements are already being made for Nadu's position to be filled at the company's next Annual General Meeting, should he fail to return before then.

The announcement has fuelled further speculation surrounding Nadu's disappearance. Friends and business associates have reportedly offered conflicting accounts of his recent activities, though the Guard has declined to comment on any specific lines of investigation.

Jacobus Kett of the Crimson Consortium has offered his organisation's continued support in attempts to locate the missing Liam Nadu and his wife. The Crimson Consortium has to date provided the City Guard with supplies and man power to aide in the search.

For now, the Golden Sails continue to operate under temporary arrangements, while Corsava waits for answers regarding the fate of one of its most prominent merchants.

INTERNATIONAL NEWS

WAR ERUPTS BETWEEN DURVAK AND THE VALROS EMPIRE

Border conflict escalates after months of diplomatic tensions

Reports reaching Corsava confirm that open war has broken out between the Durvak and the Valros Empire, following months of rising tensions along their shared border.

Fighting has reportedly been concentrated around several frontier settlements, with both sides claiming that the other initiated hostilities. Details remain scarce, although merchants arriving from the region report that several major roads have already been closed and military forces are being mobilised.

The conflict is expected to disrupt trade routes between the two powers, with merchants across the League warning that shortages and increased prices may follow should the fighting continue.

The Marivar League has not announced any military involvement and has urged its citizens to avoid unnecessary travel through the affected region.

OTHER NEWS

REGATTA PREPARATIONS CONTINUE

With the annual regatta now approaching, merchants and shipwrights across the city have begun final preparations for the festivities. Officials have promised that this year's celebrations will be among the largest in recent memory.

CITY GUARD URGES PUBLIC TO REPORT SUSPICIOUS ACTIVITY

Following several recent incidents across Corsava, the Guard has renewed its request that citizens report unusual behaviour, unexplained disappearances and suspected criminal activity.

TRADE THROUGH GUTTERWORKS DISRUPTED

Several businesses have reported delays and reduced trade as concerns surrounding the recent illness continue to affect movement through the district.

GOLDEN SAILS AGM ANNOUNCED

The Golden Sails has confirmed that its next Annual General Meeting will proceed as scheduled, despite the continued disappearance of Liam Nadu.